Volunteer E.coli Technician (Hood River)

Location: Hood River, OR

Status: Volunteer Technician

Hours & Duration: 5 to 10 hours per month from May through September 2019. The work schedule is flexible.

Position Description: Help promote healthy river contact and inform the public on safe places to swim. Riverkeeper seeks a responsible volunteer to serve as our E.coli volunteer technician from May to September (5-10 hours/month) in Hood River, OR. Technicians will become experts in E.coli monitoring techniques and methods and meet a network of volunteers and professionals working to protect the Columbia River. Prior experience with E.coli monitoring is not required. Attention to detail and ability to work independently is a must. Experience gained through this position will greatly benefit persons looking to further a career in water resources. Technicians will receive free entry to Riverkeeper-sponsored events.

Responsibilities:

- Maintain E.coli lab equipment at Riverkeeper's Hood River office
- Collect and process weekly water samples from Columbia River sites
- Follow a strict sample collection protocol
- Enter data and manage Riverkeeper's E. coli database
- Post up-to-date results on Riverkeeper's Swim Guide app
- Help coordinate teams of volunteers monitoring the river

Qualifications:

- Ability to swim and cognizant of safety precautions when wading in the river
- Work independently and with limited oversight
- Strong communication skills
- Detail-oriented regarding equipment, field protocols, and data entry
- Passion for rivers and clean water
- Represent Riverkeeper in a friendly and professional manner
- Valid driver's license
- Proficiency with Microsoft Office, particularly Microsoft Excel

Compensation: This is a volunteer position. Reimbursement for travel mileage is available.

Application deadline: April 15, 2019
