RE: Opposition to Rye Development's proposed Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project (Klickitat County, Washington)

Dear Governors Inslee and Brown, and Senators Cantwell, Murray, Wyden, and Merkley,

As elected officials committed to combating the climate crisis, we urge you to stand in solidarity with sovereign Tribal Nations and oppose an alleged “green energy” development that will sacrifice irreplaceable tribal cultural and religious resources for an uncertain benefit to our climate. Rye Development, LLC wants to build the largest pumped storage development in the Northwest: the Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project in Klickitat County, Washington, near the John Day Dam. Columbia Riverkeeper, Washington and Oregon Chapters of the Sierra Club, Friends of the White Salmon, Audubon Society of Portland, Washington and Oregon Physicians for Social Responsibility, Center for Environmental Law & Policy, Food and Water Watch, Northwest Environmental Defense Center, Friends of the Toppenish Creek, Northwest Environmental Advocates, Rogue Climate, 350PDX, and Waterkeeper Alliance respectfully request that you oppose this project and conduct robust government-to-government consultation with Tribal Nations, including the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation (Yakama Nation), the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation (CTUIR), the Nez Perce Tribe, and the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs (Warm Springs).

This development will obliterate irreplaceable tribal cultural resources, “including archeological, ceremonial, burial, petroglyph, monumental and ancestral use sites.”<sup>1</sup> According to Yakama Nation’s archaeological resource survey, completed in 2019, the development would directly interfere with multiple culturally significant sites to the Yakama Nation and other cultural property. In explaining the Yakama Nation’s opposition at a Washington State Senate hearing earlier this year, a representative from the Nation said:

As you’re aware, the Columbia River was dammed over the last century. In doing so, that impacted many of our rights, interests and resources. All of these things have been impacted: our fish sites, our villages, our burial sites up and down the river. This is another example of energy development, development in the West, that comes at a cost to the Yakama Nation.<sup>2</sup>

Rye Development has worked hard to muddle public opinion on the Yakama Nation’s position on this project and the Tribe, in comment letters to FERC, has gone as far as to say that the developer is not operating in good faith.<sup>3</sup> The Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation (CTUIR) has also weighed in on the development. While most letters submitted by CTUIR have been filed confidentially to protect tribal cultural resources, the Tribe has publicly said that “the proposed undertaking is within a historic property of cultural and religious significance,” and are poised to conduct their own cultural resources survey of the area. On October 16, 2020, the Nez Perce Tribe requested that Rye conduct an ethnographic study to identify any Nez Perce-specific resources in the Project area that could be affected by construction of the project, stating that because the Tribe did not know about the development they did not have the opportunity to submit study requests to determine detrimental impacts to their Tribe.<sup>4</sup> On October 29, 2020, FERC directed Rye to conduct that survey. Our organizations urge you to oppose this development because of the unavoidable and detrimental impacts to tribal cultural and religious resources.

Additionally, wildlife experts from state and federal agencies have also weighed in, raising serious concerns about the development’s impacts to wildlife, including golden and bald eagles, and water quality.

Furthermore, due to a combination of rising construction costs and decreasing open-market energy prices, the development cannot provide renewable energy integration and replacement capacity to support regional clean energy goals affordably and reliably. Washington’s ongoing deep decarbonization analysis has not identified this project as needed to meet the state’s regional clean energy goals. In turn, irreplaceable tribal cultural resources will be lost with no benefit to our climate. Rye Development’s claims, trumpeting this development as “green energy” are dubious at best.

In summary, we urge you to oppose this development. In addition and attached as Appendix A, we have included 1,728 comments from the public asking you to oppose this development. Alleged “green energy” cannot be built on the backs of Tribal Nations.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Abing	Don	Astoria	OR	97104	My entire family and myself are Indigenous members of our Chinook Indian Nation located in the lower Columbia River estuary. What happens on Indigenous lands and waters upriver from us greatly affect our daily lives and culture here in Chinook Country that contains Chinook Tribes of Clatsop, Lower Chinook, Wahkiakum, Cathlamet, and Willapa. We stand with our upriver Yakima relations in opposition of development that is designed to permanently injure their Culture and Natural Resources.

Asmus	Sigrid	Seattle	WA	98199-1505	I stand with the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation (Yakama Nation) against the proposed Goldendale Pumped Storage Project. The deliberate choice to cite a toxic project in an area of the state that many people are unfamiliar with is what brought vast amounts of radioactive waste to eastern Oregon, for example. In the case of Goldendale, I stand with the Tribes in opposing the loss of irreplaceable cultural property that would occur if this project is allowed to proceed. This is not a 'clean energy' project, only another toxic one posing as something other than what it is.

It's our duty as citizens of this country to acknowledge that while we can't change the actions in the past that led to the mass extinction of indigenous people in the West, we must do our best, especially companies and the decision-makers of those companies, to help preserve what is left of their cultural, spiritual and physical spaces.

Butler	Jane	Hedgesville	WV	25427-3345	Tribal Nations and Indigenous Cultures will be terribly affected by this energy proposal!
					As a resident of the Lower Columbia River Basin, I am very concerned about this project. Though pumped-storage hydroelectric projects are interesting, based on the environmental impacts and the impact on Tribal Lands, this is clearly not the place for this to occur. This would have a detrimental effect on fish and wildlife both directly by drawing large birds of prey toward bodies of water around wind turbines, and indirectly by decreasing water quantity, quality, and degrading fish habitat in the Columbia River. The Columbia River already is host to toxins, warming temperatures, and other hardships based on human impact. This river should not be harmed by yet another project that will degrade it. As human kind, we cannot keep taking from nature and hoping for the best when it is clearly outlined that even the best of circumstances will have a net negative effect. Please DENY the Rye project's 401 Certification. Sincerely, Regan Byrd

Claus-McGaha	Elly	Tacoma	WA	98407-1707	We are in a bit of a bind in wanting clean energy to replace fossil fuel energy. Pumped storage seems like a solid approach and yet the environmental and tribal concerns raised need to be addressed for this project. It is not ok to once again decide tribal concerns can just be ignored when they are inconvenient. We must do better. It's impossible to find solutions that won't have some impacts to them in terms of land use, pollution, impacts on wildlife. Speeding up the permitting process in the hopes we can just jump the hoops, doesn't make the impacts vanish. Find a way to mitigate those impacts on water usage, the animals, and most definitely the tribes. Have that conversation as many times as needed to reach an acceptable solution.

In doing so, that impacted many of our rights, interests and resources. All of these things have been impacted: our fish sites, our villages, our burial sites up and down the river. This is another example of energy development, development in the West, that comes at a cost to the Yakama Nation. Wildlife experts from state and federal agencies have also weighed in, raising serious concerns about the development, its impacts to wildlife, including bald and golden eagles, and water quality.

					Dear Governor Inslee, Senator Murray, and Senator Cantwell, I live in Trout Lake near the Columbia River Gorge and am acutely aware of the impacts that the Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Plant will have on indigenous resources of the tribes that have lived on this land for thousands of years. We (Europeans) continue to cause irreplaceable harm to native peoples along the Columbia River and it is time we recognize this and begin working together collectively to find solutions that honor indigenous peoples and the land. The process used to envision and design the Goldendale project did not at all consider the damages and will do irreplaceable harm to native resources. Please deny permission for this project to move forward. Sincerely, Kim Gilmer Trout Lake, WA

					While I recognize the possible necessity of increased electricity generation along the Columbia Basin, it is nevertheless important to honor the lives of current residents in the area. The Yakama people have been residents and caretakers of the region since long before white people arrived. Their cultural existence deserves our respect and admiration. Since whites first appeared here, Indigenous peoples have endured near total decimation of their livelihoods and cultural significance. Whites tend to step on Indigenous rights without hesitation, utterly dismissing their worth. The existing dams along the Columbia River have already destroyed whole villages and other settlements and countless sites of cultural and religious significance. All lost, utterly lost. And we whites have not the faintest glimmer of what that could mean. The continued grace and honor exhibited by representatives of the Yakama Nation should call from white leader the same level of honor in our relations with them.

					Though we need renewables to grow as quickly as possible, not all renewable projects are alike, or equally beneficial. This will become increasingly apparent as we ramp up non-fossil-fuel production. Now is the right time to exercise care and thoughtfulness, and to craft policies that weed out energy projects that will do more harm than good. The Rye project seems like a prime example of a badly-conceived intervention in the Columbia system, spruced up with shiny green paint. I urge you to consider its downsides, and turn your thumbs down.

					Hello, My name is Elaine Harvey and I come from the Kamiltpa Band (one of the 14 Bands that comprise the Yakama Nation). This project is in the Kamiltpa Band's 'usual and accustomed' areas where we gather our traditional foods for subsistence and ceremony. We see potential impacts to our sacred foods that would be altered forever and will impact our future generations to come if this project is to proceed. This land is sacred to us and there is significance of this site to the Kamiltpa Band. The locations of the proposed reservoirs and piping are areas where our culturally significant plants grow together and when the ground is disturbed it will no longer be natural.

Jacques	Karen	Sacramento	CA	95811-7105	Pumped storage projects are hugely expensive and environmentally destructive. But, even worse than that, the Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project would cause massive destruction of tribal cultural resources. Our country is just beginning to come to terms with its racist history and starting to look at how to make amends. Facing our history must include facing the genocide perpetrated against native peoples and the destruction of their lands, burial grounds and cultural resources. Green energy projects must be developed in ways that are just and that do not do further damage to Native peoples or other environmental justice communities. Native peoples should be receiving reparations, not experiencing still more destruction of their cultural resources or places that are sacred to them. Do not add to the horrific, racist damage that has already been done to native peoples by approving this ill conceived hydroelectric project.

This project does not help address climate change as designed, and Yakama Nation opposes it. Rocky Mountain Econometrics (RME) developed a model of market forces and financial viability of the project, based on data provided by the developer. RME concluded: 'It is possible that the Goldendale Pump Storage Project is being proposed with full knowledge that it will fail. Further, bankruptcy may be an unstated but integral part of the Goldendale business plan as a means of shedding sufficient debt to survive in the current wholesale power market. These results, as detailed in the report 'Appendix Alternative Debt Structures, give us pause as to whether any adverse impacts to public values such as water quality, water quantity, flow regime, fish and wildlife, tribal and cultural resources, surrounding communities, and/or recreation are worth the cost.' The corrupting influence of money in our political system is undermining our democratic traditions and discouraging Americans from voting and/or running for office. This ominous development may well end our experiment in representative democracy unless we alter this decades-long trend. For the sake of the republic, we must amend the US Constitution to state that corporations are not people (and do not have constitutional rights) and money is not speech (and thus can be regulated by state and/or federal campaign finance laws). Kisor	Dave	Pahoa	HI	96778-8115	Damming rivers that flow into the ocean has always been at best a highly questionable idea, as the sea life will be denied the nutrients they have depended upon since life there began. There are those who depend upon the sea life the trapped nutrients feed, making the damn a bad idea. The Nile Valley was incredibly fertile, but when dammed (damned?), it's now polluted with industrial fertilizer. It also severely impacted the marine life, which many depended upon. History? We don' need no steenkin' histry! A Prof had a cartoon on his door, 'those who fail to learn the lessons of history graduate. Calling something green simply because it doesn't produce significant CO2 is a ruse. Nuclear power is called green by that industry, but it'll kill you quickly or slowly depending upon the exposure. You're stuck with Hanford. Lucky you! We've a geothermal plant in our neighborhood that can leak H2S on occasion and I'm still recovering from chronic fatigue from a release in 2014.

The human race decadence and greed and utter mindlessness cannot be transferred from abusive historical economic models to sustainable justice economies by shifting onto open lands, as here referenced by Native peoples in Washington. Evidenced in US Department of Interior, USDA, Department of Forestry model: Clearing the land by intentional fire, bankruptcy, and rounding up of wild horses and killing animals so corporations and private interests can set up trillionaires' shop on the new frontier: stolen land. Joe Biden believes in fracking. Democrats have some delusional belief that 2050 will wait. This project here is another piece of crap. I expect more from Washington elected officials. 					It is way beyond time to treat the people who were living on this land we call the USA for thousands of years before white folks came, as we would like to be treated. That is, humanely, with respect and dignity, care and love. Otherwise, not only do we do damage to them and their way of life, we also continue to damage our own hearts and souls by acting out of forces that will eventually destroy us, (such as greed, selfishness, false belief that we are separate) and possibly the ability for humans and many other life forms to survive on Earth. To not respect Native peoples' needs and ways of life at this point in our history is not only unkind and inhumane, it is stupid. We humans pride ourselves on our intelligence. How intelligent, I ask you, is it to destroy the very elements you need to survive? For all our sakes, BE SMART! and do the intelligent thing. RESPECT Indigenous peoples needs and rights.

					Large hydroelectric projects have proven to be immensely harmful to the environment and impact not just the immediate waterways the dam is located in but the surrounding regional area. An entire watershed can be destroyed by one dam. There are newer technologies and if it is for irrigation there are more cost effective ways of helping farmers conserve water. This will effect generations and impact natural and cultural resources that can't be replaced.

As we seek to reduce the impacts of climate change we must make sure to come up with better solutions that does not infringe on tribal sovereignty. We have to listen to indigenous people and take their lead. Especially as many, if not all, of our environmental problems have occurred because the people of this country did not listen to indigenous people and allow their sovereignty and self-determination, as promised by many treaties signed by the US government. While I want with all my heart for President Trump to win this next election, I will not vote for him, or any other candidate running for office, that doesn't put the health of our planet before the greed of large corporations. Money would be better spent in coming up with ideas that work WITH Nature and the environmental health of this planet instead of the embracing greed of large corporations...pushing their ill-conceived 'ideas' to make life better for 'us', at the cost of the health of humans, animals, fish, fowl and our environment. This is the only planet we have, and yet it seems that our government is hell-bent on destroying her. There are other ways to solve problems that are only being compounded by the solutions our government is coming up with. They need to stand back and take a closer look at the impact all of these things are having on Mother Nature. Enough species have gone extinct because of greed and poor choices.

Morgan	Paula	Hollywood	FL	33019-5026	I want you to advance Washington State's climate goals without undermining the rights of sovereign tribal nations and indigenous people. We have taken everything from them and now this? Stop here and now.
Morgan-Sky	Martin	Santa Rosa	CA	95403-0107	With the climate change upon us aka drought and massive fires this is no time to be making neo-liberal flashy marketing schemes and feel good decisions favoring business over real serious environmental remediation. The last consideration of the original Indigenous methods of living more sustainably should be the first as well as the negative impacts/costs to the eco-system including wild life. This energy for profit is completely antiquated as I have my electric source at my residence with solar and does not have to travel miles to deliver losing efficiency as well as requiring more waste/power to do so which is what all energy for profit systems do. Waste energy providing energy indiscriminately for long distances.

					I oppose Rye Development,Äôs proposed Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project (Project). I urge you to oppose this project as well because of the detrimental impacts that this project will have on tribal cultural resources, as expressed by the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation (Yakama Nation) since 2017. Alleged ,Äügreen energy,Äü cannot be built on the backs of Tribal Nations, which are already on the front-lines of climate change and extractive industrialization and practices. According to a cultural resources survey conducted by the Yakama Nation and included in Rye Development's Draft License Application, the development would directly interfere with at least nine culturally significant sites to the Yakama Nation and other cultural property. Due to a combination of rising construction costs and decreasing open-market energy prices, the development cannot provide renewable energy integration and replacement capacity to support regional decarbonization goals aff

Rumph	Donald	Greenville	NC	27858-7335	As a former Washington resident and believer in living up to the agreements we make, I find it reprehensible that the native tribes on the Columbia River are again being forced to loose more of their rights due to Rye Development's proposed Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project. I side with the Native tribes in objecting to a project that would make Rye a great deal of money, but in no way would it benefit the people who live in that area.
Rupp	Rick	Port Townsend	WA	98368-7910	The NW has a projected energy surplus for the next several years. Renewable Energy from Wind and Solar continue to grow. Transmissions lines to the NW grid are already at capacity. Investing in a hydro storage project makes no sense. I also question what this project does to lessen the temperatures of the Columbia and compliance with the 401 Certification. Lastly, the Native Americans, the largest Stakeholder in the Columbia Basin, have suffered such damage and been abused with projects of no value for years. This project is another loser for the people of the NW and serves no public good. Rick Rupp

Saul	Susan	Vancouver	WA	98664-3874	The adverse impacts of this project on water quality, water quantity, Columbia River flow regime, fish and wildlife, tribal and cultural resources, surrounding communities, and/or recreation are not worth the speculative benefit of generated energy storage. Wildlife biologists have raised concerns that the two large reservoirs would attract birds to be killed by the adjacent wind turbines. I stand with the Yakama Nation in opposing this project.

					Dear Governor Inslee, Senator Murray, and Senator Cantwell, Rye Development,Ås proposed Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project would have detrimental impacts on cultural resources of the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation (Yakama Nation). Truly 'green' energy cannot be built on land belonging Tribal Nations that have not only undergone undo suffering but are also leading much of the battle against climate change and extractive industrialization practices. Per a cultural resources survey conducted by the Yakama Nation and included in Rye Development's Draft License Application, the development would directly interfere with at least nine culturally significant sites to the Yakama Nation and other cultural property. I ask you to continue Washington state,Ås climate progress without undermining the rights of sovereign tribal nations and Indigenous people. 					As a Yankton, Dakota Sioux woman, I stand in solidarity with the Yakama Nation. My great grandmother and her self-sustaining community at White Swan, South Dakota were forced to relocate (with no financial or practical help) when the Army Corps of Engineers condemned their fertile lands next to the Missouri River in order to make way for the Pick-Sloan Plan, an enormous dam system. My grandmother, a widow in her eighties, had to relocate the family farm house. Unfortunately, they were no strangers to forced migration as they were forced from their homelands in Minnesota. Many other tribes were grievously affected by this gigantic system, (some never recovered) however, none were consulted. As per historical precedent, Native people were considered in the way, and an inconvenience to colonizer plans to take and exploit the Earth. Even our Ancestors' graves were desecrated. Please stop the Colonizing, please stop the cultural genocide, please stop projects that promote White Supremacy.
St Pierre	Holly-Marie	Kalama	WA	98625-0700

The ecological destruction of drowning a low-elevation location, and all its cultural value to native peoples of that location, remains unacceptable as for any dam that submerged sites claimed by the Yakima Nation. Moreover, we now know that reservoirs are a potent source of methane, an ultra-potent global warming pollutant, due to their creation of unnaturally steep, narrow lateral profiles that leave unoxxygenated reservoir bottoms full of organic matter from the prior terrestrial ecosystem.

Uhart	Mark	Kalama	WA	98625-9535	I am against the Goldendale Pumped Storage Project for so many reasons. Besides violating the sovereign rights of the Yakima Nation, destroying cultural sites, it is a ill-conceived project consuming more energy than the project will create. Less construction, materials and maintenance costs, the project will never create more energy than what is used. The amount of GHGs released into the atmosphere to build these two reservoirs, pipeline and power the generating facility makes this project another huge GHG emitter. When does the madness end. This is not green energy, I am so tired of seeing our beautiful landscapes scarred by energy, mining and transportation projects. A hundred years from now people will look back and say, "What in the world were they thinking?" The state of Washington MUST recognize the rights of all 29 tribes of indigenous people in our state. 					I oppose Rye Development,Âs proposed Goldendale Energy Storage Hydroelectric Project (Project). I urge you to oppose this project as well because of the detrimental impacts that this project will have on tribal cultural resources, as expressed by the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation (Yakama Nation) since 2017. Alleged, Âugreen energy,Â cannot be built on the backs of Tribal Nations, which are already on the front-lines of climate change and extractive industrialization and practices. According to a cultural resources survey conducted by the Yakama Nation and included in Rye Development's Draft License Application, the development would directly interfere with at least nine culturally significant sites to the Yakama Nation and other cultural property. Due to a combination of rising construction costs and decreasing open-market energy prices, the development cannot provide renewable energy integration and replacement capacity to support regional decarbonization goals.
