

What legacy
do you want to leave the world?

Reflection

Legacy giving is a part of estate planning and is first and foremost for you and your loved ones. Creating an estate plan allows you to have peace of mind that your loved ones will be cared for, and gives you an opportunity to make an impact for causes you care about. Legacy planning is often about taking the time to consider what is or has been important to you. Expressing your values through a legacy gift can be the most essential part of estate planning.

Impact

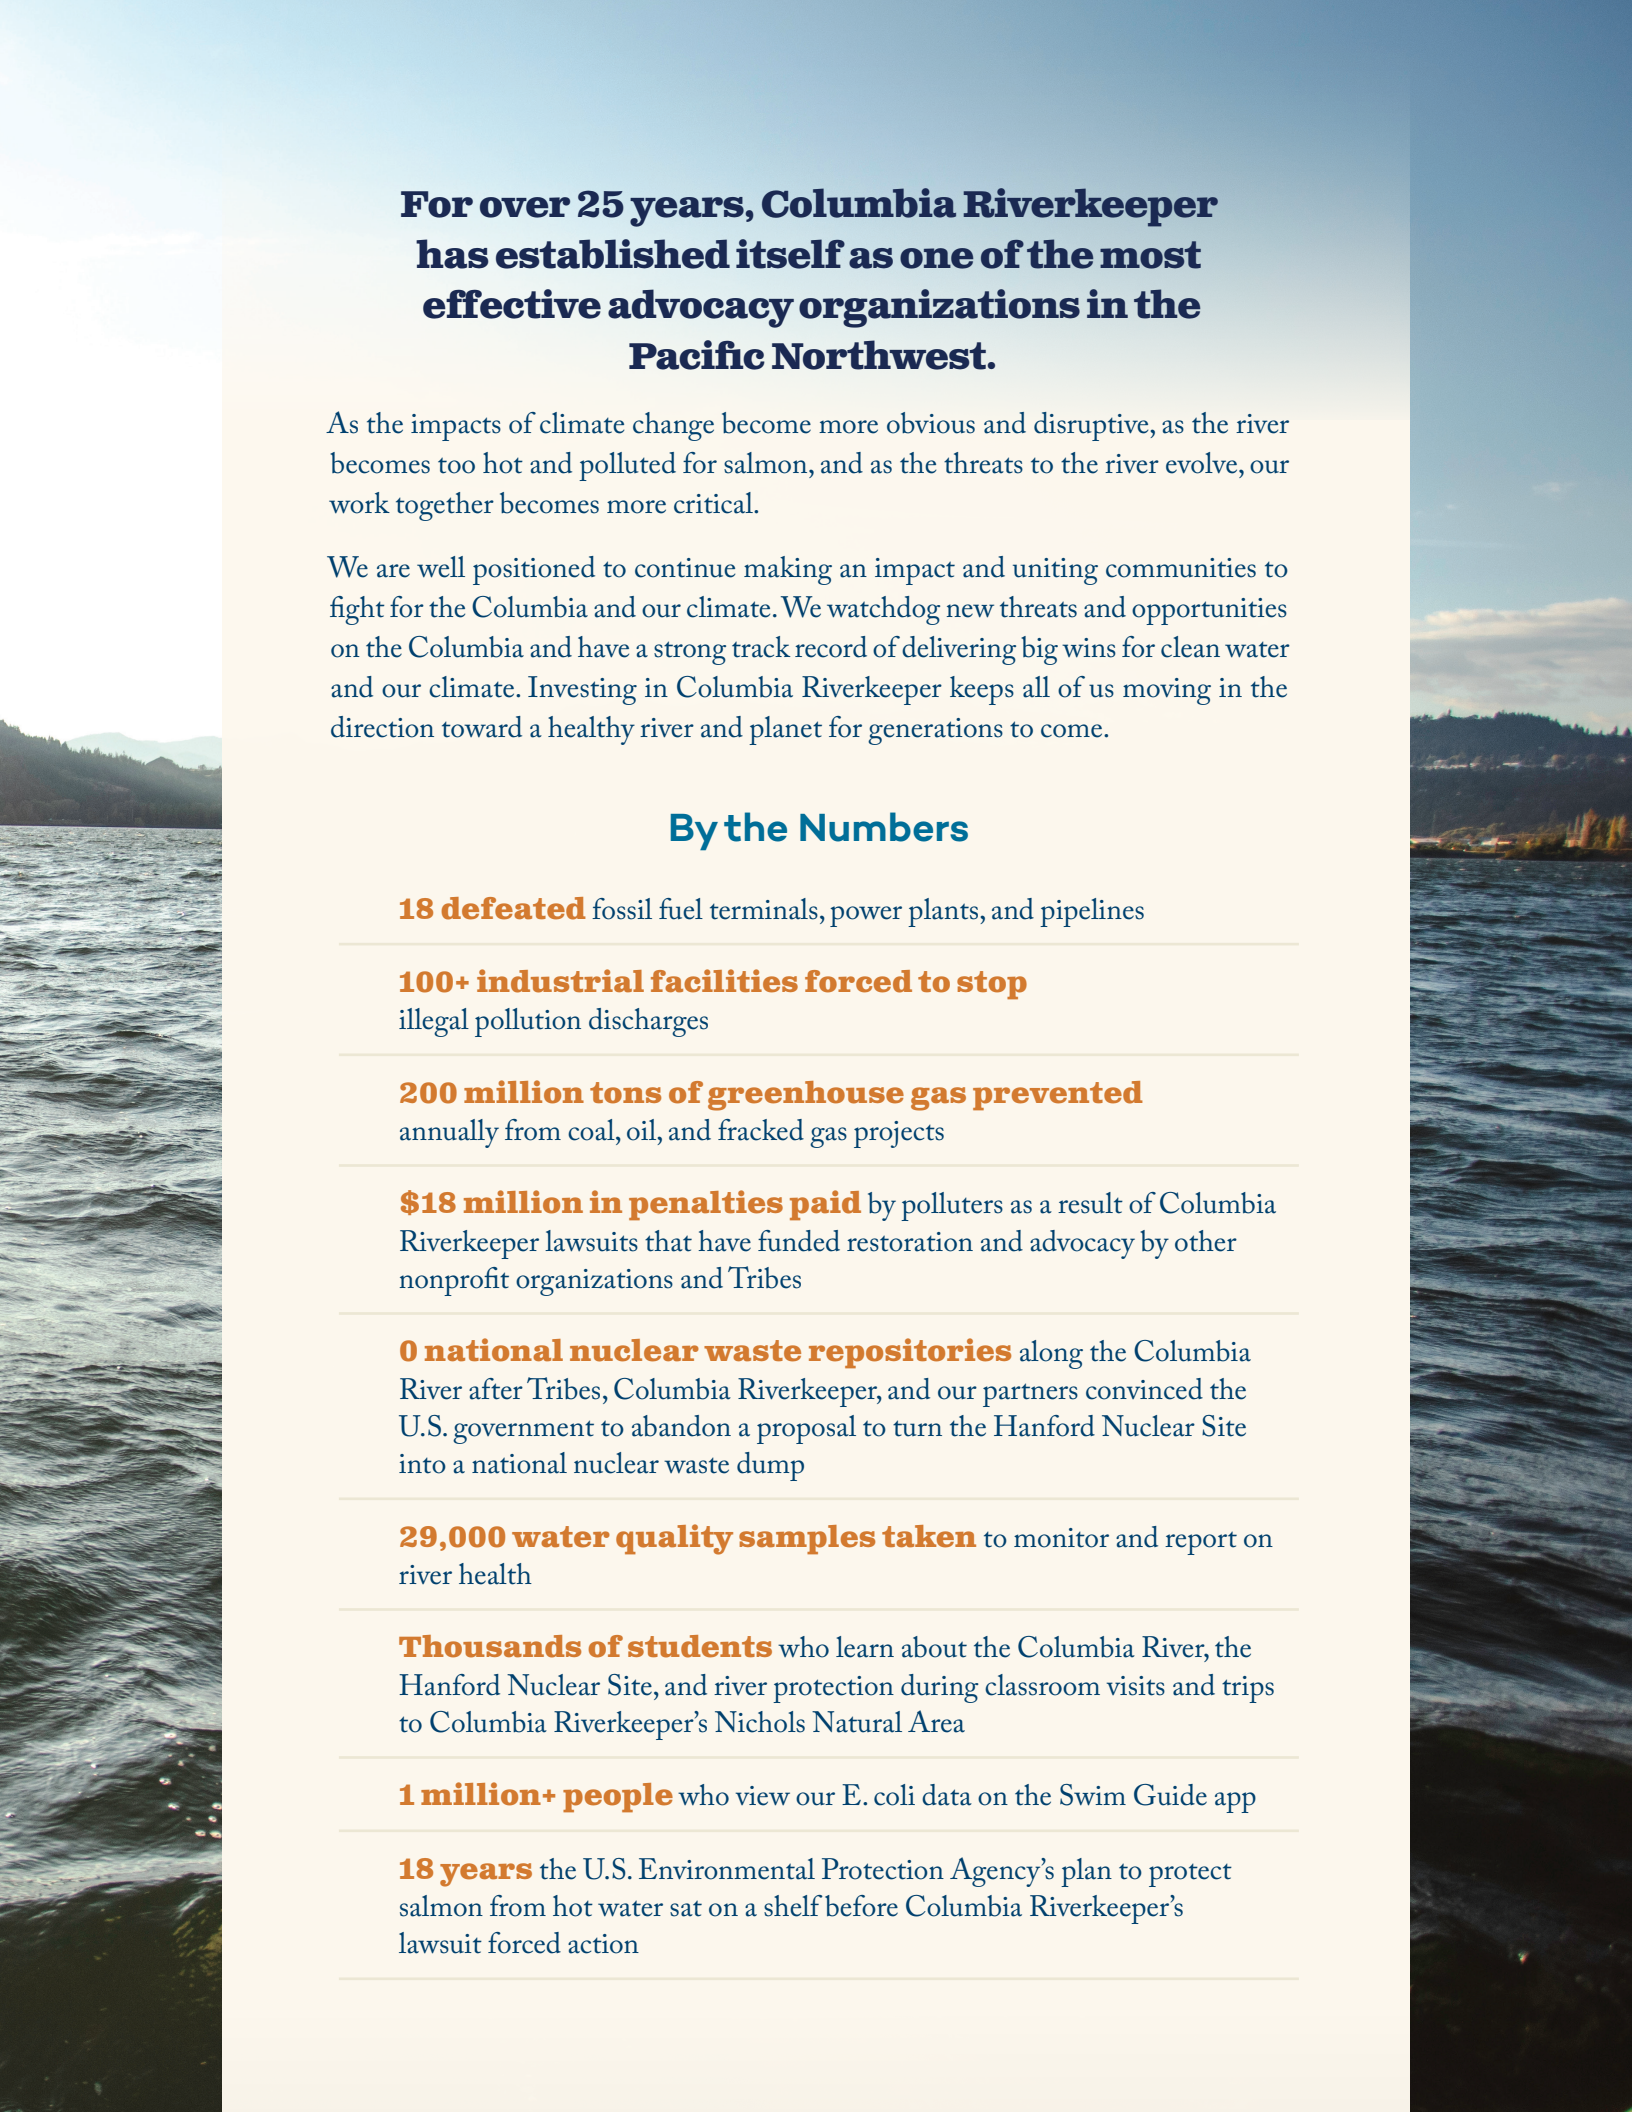

Your gift can have profoundly positive and lasting effects, no matter how large or small. Never underestimate the power of a small gift. In fact, by combining your gift with others through Columbia Riverkeeper's Legacy Giving Circle, your gift makes a deep impact for the Columbia River, the people who depend on it, and river life.

Witness the waters of the river itself. Each drop of melted snowpack or fallen rain forms streams that combine to become the vast force that is the Columbia. So too are we immeasurably vast together in aligned action.

I included Columbia Riverkeeper in my will because I consider the organization family and this is one way I can show my appreciation for all they do.

~Gayle Kiser, Legacy Giving Circle Member, Eugene, Oregon

For over 25 years, Columbia Riverkeeper has established itself as one of the most effective advocacy organizations in the Pacific Northwest.

As the impacts of climate change become more obvious and disruptive, as the river becomes too hot and polluted for salmon, and as the threats to the river evolve, our work together becomes more critical.

We are well positioned to continue making an impact and uniting communities to fight for the Columbia and our climate. We watchdog new threats and opportunities on the Columbia and have a strong track record of delivering big wins for clean water and our climate. Investing in Columbia Riverkeeper keeps all of us moving in the direction toward a healthy river and planet for generations to come.

By the Numbers

18 defeated fossil fuel terminals, power plants, and pipelines

100+ industrial facilities forced to stop illegal pollution discharges

200 million tons of greenhouse gas prevented annually from coal, oil, and fracked gas projects

$18 million in penalties paid by polluters as a result of Columbia Riverkeeper lawsuits that have funded restoration and advocacy by other nonprofit organizations and Tribes

0 national nuclear waste repositories along the Columbia River after Tribes, Columbia Riverkeeper, and our partners convinced the U.S. government to abandon a proposal to turn the Hanford Nuclear Site into a national nuclear waste dump

29,000 water quality samples taken to monitor and report on river health

Thousands of students who learn about the Columbia River, the Hanford Nuclear Site, and river protection during classroom visits and trips to Columbia Riverkeeper's Nichols Natural Area

1 million+ people who view our E. coli data on the Swim Guide app

18 years the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's plan to protect salmon from hot water sat on a shelf before Columbia Riverkeeper's lawsuit forced action

Values

Care

We care for ourselves, others, and the world around us.

Relationship building

Victories are built on strong, lasting, and reciprocal relationships with colleagues, partners, members, and decision-makers.

Equity and inclusion

We respect all people, regardless of color, ethnicity, place of origin, culture, language, age, sexuality, or gender.

Hope

We work and celebrate with creativity and optimism.

Honesty and integrity

We operate with honesty and integrity, balanced with compassion.

Our mission and programs are ambitious.

We attribute our success to an approach that combines grassroots community organizing, legal advocacy, strategic communications, and environmental education. Our work is inherently multigenerational. From holding the U.S. government accountable for cleaning up the most toxic place in America, the Hanford Nuclear Site, to working in solidarity with Tribes to restore the Columbia's iconic salmon, Columbia Riverkeeper is here for the long haul.

Get Started with Legacy Planning

How you go about estate planning is entirely up to you. It can be as simple and straightforward as you care to make it. The most critical element is to clearly make your intentions and desires known through an official document, like a will, so that the state and those around you can uphold your vision to support the future. Working with an attorney or other professionals can help ensure that you consider all aspects of your estate. Hiring professionals can ease the process, as well as ease your mind by getting support. At Columbia Riverkeeper, we partner with FreeWill (freewill.com/crk) to help make this process accessible to everyone.*

We recognize that we are all important beyond what can be known or measured in this life. A legacy gift is not a measure of your worth, your love or commitment, and it is never an obligation. It is a genuine gift and we honor it as such through our Legacy Giving Circle.

I had a charitable remainder trust set up just so I could give back to those that gave me so much joy and community. [Columbia Riverkeeper] topped my short list. Their staff is passionately committed to preserving not only the Columbia but also this sacred blue marble we live on and cherish.
